DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: Page 1, line 22, "3" should be replaced with --1--. Correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Criswell (US 2,493,282).

A locking structure combines a hook (H) and a hanging ring (B,F). The locking structure comprises a hook member (10), a hanging ring (B,F), a screw nut (25) and a spring lock pin (26). The hook member has a cylindrical locking section (14) extending from a top thereof. The locking section includes a through hole that runs radially through a cross-section of the locking section (Fig. 1). The hanging ring includes a ring coupler (b) mounted onto the locking section. The screw nut has a plurality of radially distributed blocks formed on an upper end thereof and spaces between adjacent blocks defining a plurality of radially distributed retaining slots (C.2, L. 31-40). The spring lock pin is inserted into the through hole of the locking section (Fig. 1). The locking section of the hook member is inserted through the ring coupler of the hanging ring and connecting the screw nut (Fig. 1). The screw nut is twisted and moved along the locking section to align two opposite retaining slots thereon with the through hole of the locking section (Fig. 1). The spring lock pin is inserted through the through hole and the two opposite retaining slots so as to lock the hook member and the hanging ring together (Fig. 1). Self-gravity of the hook member will cause the screw nut to move downward with respect to the ring coupler of the hanging ring so that the spring lock pin resists against an upper horizontal face of the screw nut and thus secured, without a riveting mechanism in conventional locking structures for combining a hook and a hanging ring process (Fig. 1).

The spring lock pin has a length equal to a diameter of the radially distributed blocks so that the spring lock pin is not likely to collide with a foreign object and falls off the screw nut (Fig. 1).

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Cousins (US 1,394,068), Fermier et al. (US 2,124,692), Criswell (US 2,493,282), Behnke (US 3,584,909), Engh (US 3,912,318), Powell (US 3,968,987), Springer et al.

(US 4,549,829) and Gagnon (US 6,082,793) are cited to show state of the art with respect to a locking structure that combines a hook member and a hanging ring with some of the features mentioned in the current application.
